

The Steppes Letter

Barony of the Steppes

SEPTEMBER 2014

Words from the Baroness

Unto the Barony of The Steppes does Baroness Ekaterina send warmest greetings,

Summer has started to fade away and the earth is leaning towards the winter months again. Tourney season has again started up and fall activities are filling our calendars. The past month was filled with change and new beginnings.

Please make the following change in your calendars: we are moving our monthly Populous in the Park to the second Sunday of the month. This move accommodates the archery schedule of first and third of the month. This change begins in Sept.

We are experiencing several officer changes within our Barony and Our Cantons. I would like to thank the outgoing officers for their service and welcome the new officers. I know that everyone will be happy to help you transition into your new office.

Our Artisan event was wonderful. Ly Emma Halden and Ly Gabrielle did an excellent job of coordinating the site, artisans, lunch, etc. Thank you for your hard work. Our congratulations go to HLy Katerine la Roux d'Anjou as she has been selected as the newest Steppes Artisan. We had over 25 competitors showing at this event; I assure you, the decision was not an easy one. Thank you to everyone that displayed their talents and thank you to the judges for advising me.

We are looking to future events. BAM is coming up in Nov. A challenge has been made to the female combatants to show their stamina and veracity. I hope that all our combatants are able to attend. October's big event is Coronation. Don't forget Rosenfeld has an event coming up too. Of course you can't forget Steppes Twelfth Night in January. Our theme is a Russian Twelfth Night. Emma has been posting links to various sites regarding tradition and possible clothing options.

We look forward to seeing you at populous, fighter practices, A&S nights, and archery practice. If you have space in your car, consider taking a friend along with you.

Until then, I remain ever in service to the Kingdom and Barony.

Baroness Ekaterina

Words from the Seneschal

Greeting Steppes,

We have had a great month so far and I would like to extend a hearty congratulations to the newest Steppes Artisan, HL Katarine le Roux. I also want to thank everyone that displayed as well as all those that took the time to chat with the artisans. I did not get time to chat with everyone that displayed but I had a blast grilling the chicken. I might even consider doing it again next year as a display.

Our next major event in Steppes is 12th night. Remember that many hands make light work. Please volunteer as you can to make this the most spectacular 12th Night ever.

Other notes to pass on: 'Go to other groups events! Share a ride with others (translation, drag them with you to out of area events). Have fun, go to arts night, go to archery, or one of the many practices we have. Infect others with the enthusiasm you have for this game.

That is all,

Domingo

Ladies, Lords, Mistresses, Masters, Graces, Excellencies, Majesties and Highnesses and all others who it concerns....I address you all, with fondness in my thoughts and a song upon my heart. I take comfort that I have been welcomed into a community filled not simply with frivolity and fantasy, but with warmth and reality as lessons taken from history are buffed and polished, molded into the a figure of civility, creativity and anti-quoted yet brilliant chivalry. Halls filled with chatter, laughter and merriment still echo in my ears with marketplace and town square reminiscence. And oh how the aroma of crafts and food alike, the organic smell of wood and cloth and ink and metal followed me into the night as lingering in my sight were glimpses of the artistic genius that was displayed at the site. As heralds proclaimed loudly for all to hear, what was, what is, and what will be...and as honors and new titles were bestowed upon those who have risen into light or have proven themselves worth of the rights...I felt honored as a witness to the sight. Though my name never be called and I never be called forth to kneel, ever will I be content if through words I can express how I do and did feel. As a butterfly who upon the perfect petal finds purchase, I am without proper sentiment to fully express how magnificent an experience it is indeed, to be welcomed into your family.

Ode to the Sun

By Ada Renee de Saunt

My skin is dusky and lightly furred
When I open my eyes it's your light I prefer
A crown of yellow around my head halloes
As I stand tall in dark green meadows
My sisters seek solace in clover and bees
But no greater comfort shall I ever seek
Than to bask in the warmth of your shining rays
And be made complete by your golden Gaze

Da'ud Bob Movie Review for September Twelfth Night

I have often noted in these reviews that the main difference between Shakespeare's tragedies and his comedies is the number of bodies; in the comedies, no one dies. (Admittedly, this rule of thumb can make some of his plays hard to classify. No one dies in The Merchant of Venice, but not a lot about it is very funny, either. Except maybe the part about the weird lumpy tea. You know, "The koala tea of Mercy is not strained.") Anyway, I had run across this rendition of one of his comedies that I hadn't seen before, starring some pretty big names, and thought it was worth "checking it out" for y'all. So the DVD arrived, and when the time was right, I dropped it into the tray in the player, sat back in my La-Z-Bubba recliner, and pushed "Play." And so it is that this month, Da'ud Bob reviews for you the 1969 version of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night.

Starring Joan Plowright as Viola/Sebastian, Gary Raymond as Duke Orsino, Adrienne Corri as the Countess Olivia, Ralph Richardson as Sir Toby Belch, John Moffatt as Sir Andrew Aguecheek, Sheila Reed as Maria, Alec Guinness as Malvolio, and - of all people - Tommy Steele as the fool Feste, this production of the play suffers a little, perhaps, from having so many impressive actors in it. It's hard to know, sometimes, which actor to watch, their presence being so strong even during others' lines. The plot, of course, is that of a brother and sister, separated during a shipwreck, following which the sister puts on men's clothing and calls herself Cesario, enters the service of the local Duke, woos his lady love as his intermediary, she falls in love with Cesario, who only has eyes for the Duke. (This part of the plot reminds me so much of the story of Miles Standish sending John Alden to woo Priscilla Mullins for him, and she ends up marrying Alden.) It all works out in the end, of course, as the real brother shows up, and everybody ends up with the person they love, except, of course, for Malvolio.

Good points: It's Shakespeare's words, Shakespeare's metaphors, and Shakespeare's double entendres. The two-tined fork. Alec Guinness' Malvolio prancing in the garden in yellow stockings, cross-gartered. Multiple mistaken identities that Shakespeare does so well.

Bad points: Joan Plowright is too old to play Olivia/Sebastian. I can't decide if the voiceovers are helpful (since they are often used to explain the internal dialogue going on in someone's head), or if they're just annoying (because they could often have just been said aloud). It's basically a film of a stage production with stage sets and hard lighting with strong shadows. That's okay, since it was originally filmed for television, but it could have been done so much better. Even if they'd just softened the lighting a bit it would have been a big improvement.

Zero breasts. One pint of blood. No dead bodies. Forged letter fu. Sword fu. Plots roll. Gratuitous entr'acte cards ("Part I," "End of Part I," "Part Two," etc.); they just seemed entirely out of place here. Academy Award nominations to Ralph Richardson as Sir Toby Belch for stealing the show even, or especially, as a drunk; to Tommy Steele as Feste the fool for his love songs (accompanied by himself); and to Alec Guinness as Malvolio for, as I noted above, his prancing in the garden in yellow stockings, cross-gartered (the result of a plot against him on the part of Sir Toby Belch, Sir Andrew Aguecheek, and Maria). A 42 on the Vomit Meter. Two and a half stars. Anna Sue says, "Not even Obi-Wan can save this production." Da'ud Bob says, "It wasn't quite that bad. Check it out!"

From the "Steppes Bowyer and Fletchers Guild"

Greetings,

With the return of archery to Steppes thus does our archery guild! With a lot of work cut out for us it would appear, after spending the last couple of weeks inspecting and inventorying our Steppes archery equipment there is a lot of repair to do just on the loaner arrow levy alone. So it appears as there will a lot of on-the-job training once we get started and with only 33 out of 200+ loaner arrows usable that's where we shall begin!

We are waiting for some feedback from our members as to a guild meeting & workday, so until we have settled that I suggest we use any canceled archery practice Sundays to make repairs to our Steppes archery equipment. Great opportunity for anyone wanting to learn to make and repair arrows for a good cause. Hands on instruction, lot's of practice and a task shared with good friends- you just can't beat that! Well, we are looking for volunteers, so if interested drop me an email at ironwyrms@yahoo.com and we shall get you an invitation to the guild's yahoo group for updates, posts & hopefully answers to your archery related questions!

That's what we plan for September!

Regards,

Ironwyrms

From the "Steppes Loose Association of Brewers" (SLAB, a non-guild)

Salutations,

I regret to say due to the location chosen for our Steppes Twelfth Night there shall be no opportunity to host a libation competition during the event at that site. Our next possible Steppes event to host a brewing contest shall be at Steppes Warlord 2015. That should give ya time to make something!

Regards,

Ironwyrms

Words From the Interim Archery Marshal

Greetings,

Unfortunately our first "official" Steppes archery practice was rained out as were most of our other baronial practices for August, strange weather! We are already looking forward to September and starting our bi-monthly archery practices. This month we hold archery practice on the first and third Sundays of the month. So our next official practice is Sept. 7th followed by a second on Sept. 21st. at the Westlake Sports Center, 601 Gross Road in Mesquite TX 75149 (about one mile east from 635). Start time is 2PM, and we shoot until we are done or it's too dark whichever comes first!

We have loaner gear and no shortage of veteran archers willing to answer your questions, go through the step by step introduction and/or just assist you in improving those existing skills and we have a great time doing it! If we didn't we wouldn't be out there, so come join the fun!

We are wearing grab for archery practice to generate some SCA interest but remember to dress for summer in Ansteorra. Camp chairs, cool drinks & snacks to keep yourselves comfortable and hydrated are recommended. But plan to travel light as it is a bit of a hike into the park so the less carried the better. There is a very large oak next to the range that provides shade so pop-ups aren't really needed. Ice water and air conditioning are both available within the pro-shop should you feel the need for cold. Its very different from where our previous archery practices past have been held, much better come and see!

We hope to find you on the range,

William Black Dragon

Words from the Youth Combat Marshal

Pennsic was great! We got a chance to meet youth marshals and discuss some ideas. There may be a chance to do something experimental in the local youth boffer program. More on that later..

We have acquired a large amount of 1" shaved rattan for youth sword at a greatly discounted price (about 60% off). Please contact Lady Alex or Capten Rhys and we can cut a piece to your desired length and deliver it at an event or practice for you. Cost will be 75 cents per foot. If you need a pool noodle also, we can get it, for an additional cost. We will be offering this until we run out of rattan, won't happen soon.

Sunday practices will continue to be boffer for the first half, then rapier the rest of the practice. Come out, join us, make a sword, hit your friends with it.

Once again, Steppes has a new Artisan! I am sure everyone will join in congratulating HLy Katherine le Roux d'Anjou.

I am saddened that I was unable to attend Artisan this year, due to mundane obligations. However, I got to see pictures!

And if I may be allowed to add my opinions to the many already expressed..... AWESOME!!!!!!!

I, for one, am motivated to start some major projects, as I hope many of you are. Keep in mind A&S is not just about the competitions. It is about learning and teaching medieval arts, it is about improving your SCA experience.

20 years ago, I came back to the SCA after a long absence. I fell in love with the arts. Making things, taking classes, teaching, seeing what other people do, and stretching my abilities.

I challenge everyone who reads this to do one A&S thing, big or small, in the next few months. I would love to hear about and see what you can come up with.
