A Statement from the Members of Wiesenfeuer

You may have heard about us from a friend, found us on a web search, saw our displays and demos at the Norman Medieval Fair or any number of local events or schools. Regardless of how you've found us, we're glad you did. The Barony of Wiesenfeuer is part of an organization called the Society for Creative Anachronism (SCA). It's an international organization dedicated to the researching and recreating the arts and skills of pre-17th century Europe. The "arts and skills" of Europe, and any people that Europeans had contact with, are far reaching in scope and depth. Arts include everything from making soap or butter, to making of instruments, woodworking, ... the list goes on. Anything that was made or done in the Middle Ages or Renaissance is fair game. Skills would include fighting, fencing, archery, thrown weapons, and all manner of games and talents played and practiced in six hundred years of history.

The SCA is a hands-on participation based way to learn about history. Hit your (armored) friends with rattan sticks, fence like a musketeer or pirate, or learn to shoot a bow like Robin Hood. Learn any number of arts and crafts from people that have developed skills and techniques for making and doing things the way they were centuries ago.

Beyond the competitions and projects, the royalty and ceremonies, the SCA is all about having fun. The Society is a great place to meet people with similar interests, make new friends, and be involved. So come out to an event, go to a meeting, or contact our hospitler at <http://wiesenfeuer.ansteorra.org>.

Welcome to Wiesenfeuer!!

Message from the Baronesses:

Thank you to all those who came out to support King's College in Ardmore. We hope everyone had as much of a blast as we did watching the Baronial competitions. Congratulations to those who were awarded and we hope to see everyone at many of the upcoming events this summer!

Yours in Service,
Deirdre and Valia
Baronesses Wiesenfeuer
Ladies of Haldtre and Myrgenfeld

Message from the Seneschal:

Greetings Wiesenfeuer,

The heat of June now turns to July and we are blessed to have you as members of our great Barony. With July comes our next Crown Tourney and we wish those competing to be their Majesties Heirs good fortune. If you have not had a change to witness a Crown Tourney, please go and see the pageantry and awesomeness that makes such a great event.

The weekend after Crown brings us Summer Roundtable. This is a great opportunity to find out more about offices such as Seneschal, Exchequer, and several other areas. Plus it is a free event. Feel free to go and attend classes if you are interested.

Many of our populace are gearing up to go the Pennsic later this month. For those who have the ability to travel, this will be another great opportunity to attend one of our Kingdom's Wars. We wish safe travels to any and all that are going.

Please remember that any official business with any of our officers should be done through their office email. You can find the emails for our officers on the Baronial Website. Also, if you have a problem that you need to report, please remember to start with the local officer before involving the Regional,

Kingdom, etc.. We can usually resolve problems quicker as we are here with you.

With this missive I am glad to announce that I now have a deputy. Angelina Francesca di Nardi has applied for and become my deputy. She will be my "drop-dead" deputy along which means that she gets to take over if something happens to me... (cough)...not that...(cough)...that is....(cough, gag)...likely to happen... (cough, gag, pass out)... Just kidding.

If you get out and enjoy the summer sun, stay hydrated, have fun, be good to each other, and be awesome.

Long Live the Dream,

HE Aldric de Kerr, IoM, CSS

The Scrolls of Time: Chapter 7 A Fertile Pain

Twilight gave a rich glow to the new land that lay spread before Yendel. Under darkening lavender skies lay a vast meadow set with limber willow trees. The grass lay in fields and pathways, swimming around beds of colorful bloom and wondrous texture. Yendel had never seen so many different plants. The treasure trove of flora that crowned the high borders of Halthor's grim and blasted domain filled him with a deep and abiding hope. Here was a garden lush with fantastic life, with bejeweled blossoms and fragrant flowers, with tender leaves and stout stems. Here was a place of dew and moss, of birdsong and perfume, a place untouched by the Spire's shadow and dank, stale air far below.

Yendel could just barely make out the rolling, distant hills beyond in the evening sky, their heads crowned with a simmering verdant hue as they caught the last of the sun's light. It seemed to him that he was at the edge of the real world, that the place he had called home for so long was but a sinkhole in an otherwise vibrant realm. The hope within him swelled to titanic proportions. He felt new, remade to the core....and he despaired at the thought of his loved ones far below him.

So he swore an oath. He swore it with a bellowing voice, with a passion he had never felt. He swore to the waking stars and the quieting birds and the silent willows that one day he would find a way to bring his family and his people to this garden, to this land, somehow, someday, one day. Then Yendel fell, exhausted in his bones. He slept in deep soft grass and dreamed of nothing.

The sun found him there the next morning. Yendel was at first uncertain where he was. Blades of grass filled his vision when he opened his eyes, and he was quite startled at the sight. Sitting up, he silently smiled to see he was not the victim of some delirious dream. He was indeed still free of Halthor's old lands and sitting on the edge of a beautiful garden. He stood and stretched, his mind thinking of cranberries by habit for a morning meal, when it dawned on him that other trees might produce other foods. So foraging Yendel went.

He had not taken by a few dozen steps into the garden when he began to see details that he hadn't noticed before. The garden had quite a tailored structure. The individual beds that each grassy path skirted seemed purposefully planned and well kept. Each bed was almost entirely dedicated to the growing of a particular species. Some were in the shade of the willows, some in places where they might receive some shade during the day and some lay fully exposed to the sun. He saw handcrafted fountains in some that gurgled along intricately placed stones and kept the soil moist. Others were in carefully brushed sand, some in rocky soil, some in almost pure clay. Each bed was also marked with a small sign, though neither letter nor rune could be seen on them. This puzzled Yendel greatly, until he walked up to one of the small, blank signs and knelt before it for a closer look. A soft voice spoke from the sign, a motherly voice that said, "Burning Stalk." Yendel stumbled back. No one was to be seen anywhere, and he doubted he was imagining what he had heard. It was too clear, too concise a voice.

He approached the sign again with caution. "Burning Stalk. Use in moderation. Can cause blisters, blindness, insanity. Prefers direct sunlight and dry conditions." Yendel scratched his head and laughed. Delighted with his discovery, he began to retrace his steps. He approached each sign in every bed and listened intently to what he heard....

"Icky Flick"

"Salt N' More"

"Chicken Skin Cabbage"

"Sweet Maximus"

"Savory Shrub"

"Bacon Bush"

"Alpha Garlic"

"All Nut"

"Tangy Lily"

"Butter Bulb"

"What are you doing in the garden?"

Startled, Yendel turned at the sound of the rasping voice high above him. He found himself looking into the huge, translucent eyes of the creature he knew at once, though he had only heard of it in scary stories. A flesheater, a towering monstrosity of cruel angles and harsh design. It stood higher than the willows, on four segmented legs beset with terrible boney barbs. It's sleek long body was covered with a shining jade-like exoskeleton. Atop it's long neck sat a triangular head wherein swiveled two giant orbs of pure malice above a cluster of horrific chewing mandibles.

Unlike it's miniature cousins, this mantis was not praying. It's thorn-covered arms were instead bent towards the ground, to scoop up whatever lay in it's path. It took a step forward with hellish intent and lowered it's head toward Yendel. "I said, what are you doing in this garden?" Yendel swallowed with terror.

It was a Tithing Mantis.
