A Statement from the Members of Wiesenfeuer

You may have heard about us from a friend, found us on a web search, saw our displays and demos at the Norman Medieval Fair or any number of local events or schools. Regardless of how you've found us, we're glad you did. The Barony of Wiesenfeuer is part of an organization called the Society for Creative Anachronism (SCA). It's an international organization dedicated to the researching and recreating the arts and skills of pre-17th century Europe. The "arts and skills" of Europe, and any people that Europeans had contact with, are far reaching in scope and depth. Arts include everything from making soap or butter, to making of instruments, woodworking, ... the list goes on. Anything that was made or done in the Middle Ages or Renaissance is fair game. Skills would include fighting, fencing, archery, thrown weapons, and all manner of games and talents played and practiced in six hundred years of history.

The SCA is a hands-on participation based way to learn about history. Hit your (armored) friends with rattan sticks, fence like a musketeer or pirate, or learn to shoot a bow like Robin Hood. Learn any number of arts and crafts from people that have developed skills and techniques for making and doing things the way they were centuries ago.

Beyond the competitions and projects, the royalty and ceremonies, the SCA is all about having fun. The Society is a great place to meet people with similar interests, make new friends, and be involved. So come out to an event, go to a meeting, or contact our hospitler at <http://wiesenfeuer.ansteorra.org>.

Welcome to Wiesenfeuer!!

Message from the Hospitler:

We have a class coming up on beginners garb, watch the Facebook pages for time and date.

Anyone needing to borrow garb can call or email me at least 2 days before any event to arrange for access to the loan closet. The earlier the better.

Keep being awesome and try all the things!

Lady Maureen

Message from the Seneschal:

Greetings Wiesenfeuer!

The month of October is upon us as is the Fall season. October brings us Namron's Protectorate event, Coronation, Northern Border Skirmishes - Incipient Canton of Wyldewode, Samhaine... and many other glorious events. To say that the event calendar is full of great events would be an understatement. Remember to take care when traveling and stay hydrated even if the temperature drops to a more reasonable temperature.

Here in the Barony we have many offices that have come open as our current staff of officers complete their two year commissions. Feel free to ask an officer if they are excepting applications for their office or looking for deputies. They will be able to give you valuable information on their office and how to apply should you be interested in doing so.

Remember to have fun, be awesome, and help others when you can.

Long Live the Dream,

HE Aldric de Kerr

Message from the Archery Marshall:

Greetings archery shooters! There is constant up keep of equipment in archery, fletchings get damaged, arrows bent, tips fall off, strings need wax, etc. The August 5th-12th I am opening my schedule and shop to those who need assistance fixing your gear, anytime between 8a-8p on any of those days you may email or call me to schedule a time to come over and we will fix your gear, or build new gear if you need new arrows (keep in mind arrows take a few days due to dry time of the sealer, when you schedule wit me I'll tell you what you need to do in advance to help things along). Please schedule a time with me as far in advance as you can since I do work 8-5 everyday but can usually get off pretty easily with a day's notice at minimum. This will be done at my home, so when you schedule a time with me I will then give you my address. You are expected to get the equipment you need to fix your stuff, I can provide glue and tools but not the materials like fletchings, tips, nocks. I look forward to working with you.

Happy to help,

Wolff

Message from the Rapier Marshal:

Loander paints and brushes available. No fees are collected unless you want to take/keep the paint.

Youth Combat3

Date: Wednesdays Time: 7pm - 8pm

Place: 1441 W Indian Hills Rd Norman, OK 3

Youth combat is for boys and girls are 6 to 15 years. They fight with foam-padded weapons. There are 3 age divisions within the program; 6-9 years, 10-12 years, and 13-15 years. The armor requirements and the strength of blows allowed increase as a child progresses through the levels.

Beginning Equipment for Youth Combat:

Each new youth fighter should wear long pants, a long-sleeve shirt, closed-toe shoes, lightweight gloves, and groin protection. A parent or an adult designated by the parent needs to be present throughout the practice.

There is some loaner armor but anything you can provide yourself is helpful. Armor requirements vary by age but all ages will need a helmet with face guard (such as a hockey or lacrosse helmet) and a gorget (medium-weight leather with ½ inch closed-cell padding). Knee and elbow pads are required for the older kids and helpful for the younger. The full armor and weapon requirements and rules for combat may be found in the Complete Participants Handbook. This is available on the Kingdom Earl Marshal's website at <http://marshal.ansteorra.org/armored>. Of course feel free to contact your friendly local marshal with any questions!

The Scrolls of Time: Chapter 9

INSERT TO THE SCROLLS OF TIME

The editors of this work decided that this portion of the book would be the appropriate place to comment on the effect of the Scrolls of Time on modern society, limited though they may be. When they approached me for my notes on the subject, the basis for my series of collegiate lectures entitled “Singing and Gravity—You Cant Be Serious”, I was delighted that the subject garnered the interest of the commercial publishing industry. So here, compiled from my studies of numerous law enforcement interviews and statements, is my essay for your consideration. Prof. Wilbert Frath.

At this point the layman may begin to recognize the familiar elements of the Yendelian Revival of the 1980’s. The evidence of limited mass hysteria in select groups is significant and brings into question the hypothesis that group delusions can be swayed by information saturation. People, it would seem, will pick and chose what information to digest, and many appear to have a near ravenous appetite for the sordid and the grotesque, often neglecting fact and logic in the process. The internet was still many years away from it’s massive residential presence, but Atari, Nintendo and Intellivision were heralds in many living rooms, sooth-sayers of the new age of pixels and software. Cable television was growing by leaps and bounds in the first part of the 1980’s. Numerous magazines on a variety of current events were available, and newspapers were being delivered far outside their original territories, so that a farmer in Kansas might receive the LA Times or the Washington Post by mail. Talk radio and talk television were swelling in influence. Yet even in these infant years of the Information Age, the sort o hysteria that once swept through humble Salem, Massachusetts was now knocking on the doors of many Americans. These days it is called the “Azolite Panic”, but it’s height, roughly 1982 to 1989, many perceived the threat as quite real.

Few knew it’s true beginnings, when the fragmentary comments of the first “Scrolls of Time: The Secrets of Yendel” first appeared in Waldenbooks locations across the country. No one really paid attention. The work, now considered a hack job by student of the Duke University Theology Department, languished beside books on phrenology and copies of “Dianetics!: The Comic!”. It did seem to catch the attention of a few eccentrics, however, and sales began to slowly rise as urban legends were shared amongst friends. Usually the tale consisted of a friend of a second cousin or what have you. The individual is crossing a darkened mall parking lot or closing up a store for the evening when they are surrounded by dark mysterious figures. These attackers always wear dark clothing and an inordinate amount of buttons. Invariably they sang threats at their victim, usually odd warning of town wings and befouled cranberries.

Soon, these stories began to gain a credibility due to their media attention. Local news reporters would tell the dire tale of the attack, interview the supposed victim, and a few even showed “proof” of the attack by panning the camera to a piece of shrubbery tied with strips of fried bacon, left as a grim reminder. Within months conspiracy theorists emerged, and soon America had a few new words in their tabloid-soaked vocabulary, words like “Tunaria” and “Azole”, “Zhul-yet” and “Tithing Mantis”. Rumors were treated as potential threats to whole communities as journalists spoke in serious tones about “ripping the wings of liberty from America” or “Delivering the Curse of the Mantis”. Lurid gossip became nightly news. In Philadelphia, Chicago, Dallas, and Salt Lake City, newscasters were even recorded warning parents that “the following report may be too intense and frightening for young children.”

America lapped it up. Teens who didn’t read the <sup>12</sup>Scrolls still knew what they were, and could chat casually about the nationwide Cabal of Azolites that would soon control the Senate, the Supreme Court and the Cabbage Patch Doll Registry. Gourmet cooking became a taboo overnight. In Boston and Seattle, young business executives used so-called “repressive memory therapy” to recall horrendous tortures visited on them by chefs in local restaurants. To this day, many of these talented people still find trouble working. A few of them sadly ended their cooking lives and moved on, becoming executives of the Food Network. They may never truly recover.

“Experts” appeared all over television and spoke candidly on talk radio shows. Their claims are on record, often with changing details, yet none have ever been verified. They swore that across the country young women with decent singing voices were being abducted just before Thanksgiving, locked in greenhouses with a single praying mantis for company. These young women were called “Zhul-Yets” and told that they were to remember everything.

Grocery stores yanked cranberry products from the shelves, fearful they would be abused. Department stores that sold buttons were picketed by outraged demonstrators. Singing was forbidden in public schools as “a distraction of the educational process”. The Praying Mantis hovered near the qualification for the endangered species list, as they were thought to signal Azolite activity.

It all came screeching to a halt when Phill Donahue interviewed Zach Palsey, an Arkansas native who claimed to have once been the “Most High Tunarian Azole” for a group of Azolites he claimed controlled the National Dentist’s Association. When his claims were exposed as complete myth, he began to wave his arms and sign at Donahue’s startled audience. That audience laughed, and America laughed with them.

Nowadays, all that is left of the Azolite Panic is the popular webcomic ‘Diet Azolite’ and rumors of an unfiled X-Files episode wherein agents Mulder and Scully expose Emeril as an actual Azole, able to fly when he yells “Bam!....Bam!”. Hopefully, this current and much more accurate rendition of the Scrolls of Time will help people come to appreciate the beautiful story of Yendel, which was sadly forgotten in the tabloid 80’s. Enjoy the rest and remember that Yendel is the reason for the season, though which season remains an enigma.
